

Personalized marketing materials still work wonders, but how can your company collect enough data for personalization without violating privacy laws? What's the balance between respecting user privacy and effectively using data? Let's explore these questions further.